Mrs Hayes Dead

FREMONT, O., June 25 Mrs Hayes wife of ex President Hayes died at 6 30 o'clock this morning

Mrs Hayes maiden name was Lucy Ware Webb She was born on August 28, 1831 at Chillicothe Ohio being the youngest child and only daughter of Dr James Webb and Maria Cook Her grand father Judge Isaac Cook came from Connecticut in 1781 and all four of her great grand fathers served in the revolutionary war Her father served in the war of 1812 Mrs Hayes married on December 30, 1852

At the breaking out of the rebellion her husband entered the army and from that time until the close of the war her home was a refuge for the wounded sick and furloughed soldiers going to or returning from the front She spent two winters in camp with her husband in Virginia and after the battle at South Mountain where he was badly wounded hastened to join him at Middleton, Md and later spent much time in the hospital near Frederick City. During the four years of her life at the White house she was distinguished by the graceful cordiality with which she received all who came Since the retirement of her husband from public life she has been an ardently interested member of the Woman's Relief Corps and has served during many successive years as president of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mrs. Hayes passed a quiet night, sinking gradually until the hour of her death At her bedside were the distinguished family, together with Mrs Mitchell, a cousin of General Hayes Mrs. Huntington, a cousin of Mrs. Hayes, Lucy Keller Mrs A H Miller, and the physicians.

All night long the sorrowing family watched around the bedside Mrs. Hayes lay motionless and but for the faint breathing and weak fluttering of the pulse, there were no signs of life The anxious watchers, waiting only for the inevitable end, were bowed with grief and scarcely a word was spoken the long night through The physicians kept in the background and the family were alone with the loved one. In vain they hoped for a slight rally that might come before death so that she could recognize and speak to them As morning dawned her hold on life grew weaker and weaker and finally the spirit took flight In voices choked with grief the physicians announced that the end had come and the family's long vigil closed in prostration and grief. General Hayes and the four grown sons Burchard, Webb, Reed and Scott, were deeply affected while Fannie was nearly prostrated with grief and her long sleepless watch at her mother's bedside The entire city is in mourning, and all flags are at half mast. Telegrams of condolence have been received from many friends, among them being one from President and Mrs. Harrison

The Last Hours.

CLEVELAND, June 25.—A Leader special from Fremont, Ohio, says The sad and long hours of watching and waiting for some change for the better in the condition of Mrs Hayes have ended. All through the night the physicians and family were constantly in and around the sick chamber. In the early part of the night there were fears that the end was not far off and at 2 o'clock this morning answers came from the residence that she was failing In fact, that was the predominating feeling, but she would occasionally rally for a short time and then relapse At a few minutes before 7 o'clock this morning the sad announcement was made that Mrs Hayes had passed away at half past six o'clock Her death was very easy and without distress General Hayes was much affected but, as did all the family, bore up as well as could be expected

Mrs. Hayes never regained consciousness after her attack on Friday last She had not been able to retain any medicine or nourishment Beside the family and physicians there were present during the last hours Mrs Mitchell, of Columbus, General Hayes, Mrs Huntington, of Moss Point, Miss a cousin of General Hayes, and Mrs A. H Miller, of this city, who is an intimate friend of the family and who has been constantly in attendance During last evening Mrs Hayes' pastor Rev J. M Mills and Rev. C E Burns, pastor of the Presbyterian church, were at the Hayes residence and were requested to hold services in the sick room Only the family and attending physicians were present After a short scripture reading brief prayers were offered by both ministers

The funeral will occur on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence in Spiegal Grove Complete arrangements have not yet been made President McCabe of Delaware university will be the officiating clergyman President McCabe officiated at their marriage and also at their silver wedding anniversary Telegrams of sympathy and condolence are being received from the people of the country

Phelps in Washington

WASHINGTON, June 25 -- William Walter Phelps one of the American commissioners to the Samoan conference in Berlin, arrived in Washington and called upon Secretary Blaine this morning and had a long consultation Phelps delivered to Secretary Bayard a duplicate copy of the treaty between the commissioners It was placed in safe keeping in the department where it will be jealously guarded until congress meets and its terms are formally communicated by the president to the senate for action

Growing Weaker.

LANCASTER, Pa., June 25 -- General Cameron had a weak spell during the night, but rallied this morning. He continues to grow weaker His family are gathered about the bedside and prepared for the end which may come at any moment At the same time if there should be no spell of weakness similar to the one that attacked him last evening he may survive the night

Determined Steps

BUTTE, Mont June 25 --Sheriff Hayfron with a posse of twenty men left Missoula at noon for the Flat Head reservation to make an arrest in connection with the Indian murders The orders from the war department will prevent the calling out of troops from Fort Missoula and at the request of Indian Agent Bowman two companies were dispatched on a special train at 1 o'clock It is thought that the presence of the troops will restore order so as to permit the arrests to be made

Young Lady Suicides

DENVER, June 25 —A Times Trinidad special says Word was received in this city last night that Miss Terris Ricard son of Hoehne Colorado had committed suicide yesterday afternoon by shooting herself with a rifle The bullet entered her forehead and came out through the crown of her head, breaking the skull and causing instant death The deceased was only about 22 years old She was well known throughout this city. Ill health was the cause for her committing the rash act.

Wreck of the Grenada

NEW YORK, June 25.—Bollay, superintendent of the Pacific Mail company, was asked this afternoon if any particulars of the wreck of the Granada had been received He replied that news of the disaster reached the company through a dispatch from Acapulco, Mexico. The place where the vessel went ashore was eighty miles south of Manzallia, the nearest telegraph station and 150 miles north of Acapulco where the agent of the company lives The agent received word from Manzallia that the steamer went ashore and at once went to the spot Bollay expected to hear from the agent in a day or two as he would go to Manzallia and telegraph the particulars as soon as he could get them

Fighting Over Passenger Rates

CHICAGO, June 25 --At a meeting of the Western States Passenger association to day there was a lively discussion over passenger rates The Chicago and Alton claimed that the rates were being manipulated between Chicago and Denver through the medium of scalpers and that by such irregular methods the rate was reduced from $40 to $26 by the Rock Island route It therefore asked permission to make an open rate of $26 The Alton people contended that there were 600 tickets in the hands of Denver brokers, 400 of which are being sold at reduced rates The Rock Island officials emphatically deny this allegation The whole matter was left with Chairman Abbott for decision.

Stock Market.

NEW YORK, June 25 --Stocks to day were firmer and more active for railroad shares and trusts were weak and feverish occupying a less prominent position in the transactions, although they were still extremely active and the sales of lead again crossed the 100,000 mark There was no news of importance to affect any portion of the market. The opening was rather heavy and the first prices generally from ¼ to ¾ per cent lower Transactions in lead were again on a large scale and fluctuations in sugar were very wide and the gain yesterday was lost as quickly as it had been made The excitement in trusts rapidly passed away and fluctuations after the first hour were made within a comparatively narrow range The regular list confirmed strong and prices slowly crept up, though there was little animation outside of a few leaders until towards the delivery hour, when real collections began and the market moved off slowly The close was quiet and fairly steady generally at small fractions better than opening prices

Gold Bank Robbery.

DENVER, June 25 --A Times Leadville special says Sheriff Maxwell of Saguache county was notified yesterday that three men had robbed the San Miguel Valley bank of Telluride of all its loose cash and escaped with their plunder going in the direction of the Ute reservation The report stated that they entered the bank soon after it opened for business while the cashier was alone making collections and the bookkeeper was absent He was overpowered and compelled to do their bidding on penalty of his life A footed man told that he saw three men were in the bank and the footed man saw before the bookkeeper could give the alarm

The last heard of the robbers was at Trout lake between Rico and Telluride evidently intending to cross the range that they were heading for Arizona but as they are believed to be familiar with the country in and around the Sierra La Sal mountains it is believed by all they will endeavor to reach Utah Strong posses are in hot pursuit from Telluride and the authorities at Durango Robert and Frank Lester have been notified to arrest and head them off if possible The amount stolen is about $4,500 The depositors will suffer no loss as the officers and stockholders are wealthy

OHIO REPUBLICANS.

The Meeting of the State Convention at Columbus.

State Ticket to Be Nominated at To-day's Session.

Probable that Governor Foraker Will be Nominated.

Republican National Platform of 1884 to be Endorsed.

Ohio Republican State Convention

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 25 --The republicans of state convened for the purpose of nominating candidates for governor, lieutenant governor, supreme judge, treasurer, commissioner of schools, attorney general, clerk of the supreme court and member of the board of public works next at 4 o'clock this afternoon

The interest in the work of the convention centers mainly in the nomination for governor The general tendency of opinion is that Governor Foraker will be renominated for a third term although he has not distinctly avowed himself a candidate In case the nomination does not go to Foraker Congressman Kennedy and A. S. Bushnell will be the strongest candidates

The committee on resolutions to night agreed upon a report to be made to the convention to morrow The resolutions adhere to all the principles enunciated by the republican national platform of 1884, especially protection endorses Harrison's administration and commends the liberal policy being carried out by the present bureau and favors the passage at the next congress of a proper equitable pension bill for all honorably discharged union soldiers and seamen of the late war, demands protection for the wool growing industry, congratulates the people of Ireland on the progress of their struggle for home rule and endorses the course of President Harrison in the selection for honorable positions in the diplomatic service of worthy and representative Irish American citizens The remainder of the platform is devoted to state issues

Mrs Whiteling Hung.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25 —Mrs. Sarah Jane Whiteling was hanged here this morning at 10 o'clock The body was cut down at 10 40 o'clock

The crime for which Mrs. Whiteling suffered the extreme penalty was the deliberate poisoning of her husband and two children for the purpose of securing a small life insurance which she carried on each of their lives The husband died March 20, 1888 one child April 24, and the other May 26 After her arrest the woman made a full confession detailing the agonies her little ones suffered as she slowly poisoned them Her sweet faced daughter, aged 9 years, lingered in a excruciating pain three days. The aggregate insurance received for the three murders was less than four hundred dollars

Mrs Whiteling's hearing throughout the terrible ordeal was the most remarkable exhibition of fortitude and resignation to her fate. During the entire morning she never for a moment showed the slightest evidence of weakness and frequently expressed her pleasure at the prospect of joining her husband and children.

A Texas Feud.

AUSTIN, Tex., June 25 —The killing of Red Gibson at Wharton last Saturday by Kyle Terry has stirred up bad blood in Wharton and the adjoining county of Fort Bend and there are grave fears that the opposing factions will clash and much blood be shed. The governor last night received several telegrams in reference to the trouble which has been brewing for two years One was from Sheriff Garvey at Richmond who says: "County Attorney Meek is authorized to report that as sheriff of Fort Bend county, I am unable to enforce the law without a conflict of arms and ask assistance from the state to disarm the community and enforce obedience to the law."

Another was from Sheriff Jones of Wharton county and says "The examining trial of Kyle Terry has been set for the 26th Mob violence is seriously threatened and the prisoner's life is in danger The force at hand is very inadequate to uphold the law Please order the "Victoria riflas" here to morrow to assist me in maintaining peace during the riot"

In compliance with the above the governor last night ordered the "Victoria rifles" to Wharton and this morning ordered Captain Jones' Rangers to Richmond The feud is a political one

Grand Jury to Resume Work.

CHICAGO, June 25 --The special grand jury after having devoted several days to other matters will to morrow return to the Cronin case An inkling as to the programme particularly as to Alexander Sullivan, was asked of State's Attorney Longenecker to night There will be a good deal of fishing "was all the other would say Longenecker does not appear to be very greatly impressed with the elaborate reports which have been sent out that there were two forcible trials of Dr Cronin in Camp 20 and that it was decreed that the doctor should be put out of the way for exposing information which was derived by the London Times and intended to injure Parnell The state's attorney is quoted as saying "This Camp 20 business is only a theory which I am trying to work out There is nothing new in it and the old story has simply been reworked around the small fact that a certain man called at my office yesterday morning Camp 20, the state's attorney has learned to day, has within the past week been disbanded Edward Spellman ex president of the [illegible] and Michigan was subpoenaed to night to explain the reason for the disbandment The break up of the camp at this time is not pleasing to the state's attorney

NEW WATER WORKS

Successful Test of the Brookside Water Company's System Yesterday

At 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon the last of the water pipes of the Brookside Water and Improvement company's new works was made The test was very successful and showed conclusively that the company has one of the best water works systems put in Pueblo county The first was made from a two inch pipe at the entrance to Perry Johnson's race track, and the last made at the extreme end of the system At the hour there was gathered about the plug quite a distinguished party of citizens interested in the success of the test Among them were Messrs George Trimble and A. V. Hunter of Leadville Mr J. E. Rhodes of the firm of Rhodes Brothers Denver Mr. M. Llewellyn of Chattanooga, Tenn., members of the city council, and members of the Brookside company Attached to the plug was a hundred feet of hose and to that a nozzle from one of the hose carts Mr S. T. Weeks, who has had charge of the construction of the plant, turned the water on and instantly a splendid stream of pure mountain water shot straight into the air 75 to 80 feet It was estimated that the pressure was about 140 pounds All present expressed themselves as delighted with the exhibition

The company takes its water from the creek in North Cheyenne canon about four miles distant from where the test was made It is carried to that point in mains of the following sizes 650 feet of 10 inch pipe, one half mile of 8 inch pipe, three fourths of a mile of 6 inch pipe and the remainder in 4 inch pipe. The water is taken from the creek into a small reservoir or settler and thence into the pipes The reservoir is about 400 feet higher than the point where the test was made

The properties lying along Cheyenne creek now have as fine a supply of water as can be wished The Brookside company was organized some months ago largely through the efforts of Mr. T. E. Johnson, and is composed of the property owners who claim a ditch right along the creek The plant has cost about $20,000 and the increase in value of the properties in that vicinity since work was begun has more than equalled the outlay twice over. The work of construction has been carried on under Mr. S. T. Weeks, who has had considerable experience in constructing water works systems He states that after the water was turned in last Saturday not a leak was found in the four miles of pipe. All of the pipe used was purchased from Rhodes Bros of Denver, and was made at the Chattanooga Foundry and Pipe works Only one piece of pipe was broken or found defective Mr Llewellyn, who was present and an interested spectator yesterday, is the secretary and treasurer of the company.

The new compound engine and its accompanying dynamos at the electric light works are now in complete running order. The increased facilities afforded by their introduction will soon be taken up for linemen are now busy placing lights over the city which will, when all are in position, take up all the electricity they can furnish. The demand for arc lights has been so great recently as to compel the company to order another large arc dynamo It is expected to arrive here very soon Orders for arc lamps are now booked for over half the capacity of the new machine Under the able management of Superintendent Wade this city is furnished with better lighting facilities than is enjoyed by any city in the country many times the size of this This statement is vouched by the continually increasing demand for their light

The band concert in the park last night was one of the most pleasant ever given Mr Joseph Spence the new cornet player in the music city last night played a solo in Brown's Auto Stock Polka that should have been heard by all lovers of good music The programme for the evening's concert will be found in the GAZETTE each morning hereafter The following is the programme for this evening's concert

Are 100 to 140 feet in width. THE ALLEYS are all 20 feet wide. There are no 60 or 80 feet streets, and narrow, 10-foot alleys, such as are found in other loudly advertised "Additions," with high sounding titles, where you pay high prices for lots, without duly considering that you are throwing away your money.

In the Alley Behind Every Lot in Parrish's Addition

There is a 3-inch Water Pipe, connected at Chestnut street with a 16-inch main; the Largest in the City's System. THE MAIN CITY DITCH, taking pure, clear water from the Fountain, runs just back of PARRISH'S ADDITION, and within a stone's throw of it.

YOU ARE SURE TO GET WATER

Mrs. May Kendall, the young English poetess, whose semi-humorous and pathetic fantasies, originally contributed to Longmans' Magazine and Punch, were recently gathered into a volume called "Dreams to Sell," has now written her first novel, "Such is Life." It will be published shortly by Longmans Green & Co., both in London and New York.

Mrs Hayes the wife of ex President Hayes is dead Mrs Hayes has been a somewhat remarkable character She has often been laughed at and not infrequently sneered at but she had character and brain enough to do what she thought right without regard to what others thought The same simplicity and quiet dignity characterized her conduct as the wife of a private citizen of Ohio as when she was the first lady in the land. Mrs Hayes has always found time for a great deal of charitable work and since retiring with her distinguished husband from public life has devoted herself almost wholly to doing all the good she could for those who needed help She was a true woman, wife and mother and her death will be generally regretted.

The Denver Republican appeared yesterday in a new dress It is a great compliment to say that the appearance of the paper is improved by it. The Republican has always had the best make up of any daily newspaper in the state The telegraph editor has had charge of the make up of the paper instead of the advertising room. For this reason, the Republican has always been a pleasant newspaper to read. The present dress gives it perhaps a more metropolitan appearance. There is no waste paper on the margins which, perhaps, looks appropriate in a daily. The Republican type is lighter face than that formerly used and contains a good supply of old style letters which materially add to the appearance of the paper. Now, if it would only keep out the pictures of the quack doctors as well as some of their indecent advertisements, it would make a very perfect paper typographically. The Republican states that it has spent some forty thousand dollars in the last year in improving its press facilities and adding in other ways to its plants, in order to meet increasing business. The Republican deserves this success Col E G Cooper has managed its business interests with great care and ability.

The Chicago Times says that there is not a city in the United States that is not glad with envy because Chicago continues to advance as the great American news center. If conceit were a thing to be envied, Chicago would be envied. But its newspapers have been of the very worst type in this country. They have changed for the better, however, in the last few years. The Chicago newspaper of five years ago looked more like a ... sheet than a newspaper. Most of them have now adopted the style, of the New York papers in keeping the advertisements in their proper places and not allowing them to invade territory legitimate to news. This was a great step in making news the chief thing in the paper, instead of advertising. The Chicago papers have also represented the worst phase of American journalism, in making all scandals so very prominent. A newspaper ought to show the comparative value of news in the amount of space which it gives to it But any divorce suit, where the parties had no prominence and there was no reason for noticing it, would be given columns for the recital of disgusting facts It has also been a pioneer in the worst phase of society news The items were written in a way to please very vulgar, ambitious people who cared nothing for entertaining except for the notoriety that was given through the newspapers and who measured the quality of the dinner by the number of courses that were presented If there is anything that Chicago ought not to have been proud of in the last twenty years it has been its newspapers and the kind of enterprise they have shown

Following upon the July chapters of "The Life of Lincoln"—which as already announced, describe the president's renomination and Mr Greeley's self suggested peace trip to Niagara—there will probably be only six more installments of this remarkable history in the Century series It is said that these concluding chapters deal with the most important and absorbing personal and political topics, to which Messrs Nicolay and Hay bring a vast fund of special information Lincoln's sagacity in dealing with men and measures can (occasionally his humor) come out in strong relief in the chapters that give the inside view of the account of the rallies to defeat the renomination of the president of the disagreements resulting in cabinet changes of Chase's appointment to the chief justiceship and of the executive dealings with the copperhead conspirators at the north. No part of the work will attract more attention than the account of the measures adopted by the religious denominations in support of the administration, and of the sympathy and wisdom with which the president met the suggestions of the churches Of the interest of the last three installments it is only necessary to say that they cover the period from the secret treasonist to the death of Lincoln and the collapse of the rebellion. The publishers announce that the back numbers of the Century from November, 1881, containing the installments of the Life of Lincoln are now in demand and will soon be out of print. Of several of these numbers 25,000 have been printed and fifty thousand copies are reported

Mr W ... the art editor of the New York Evening Post, has M Hebert's celebrated painting "A Shepherd Playing on the Flute" one of the best examples of modern French painters and perhaps the best representative still living of the great French school of art. Mr W ... has also a fine work by Corot and other works of art. Mr W ... has been instrumental in the secure the support of the engravings of the elaborate character under supervision of the work of such pre Raphaelites as Lancelot Gowy Spinelli and others to have already been shown and which in the productions of the paintings of these artists are of the highest value to art students the general public will be more interested in the later work, which is to include admirable specimens of the art of Perugino Leonardo Titian Michael Angelo Raphael Paul Veronese Correggio Tintoretto and many other well known names the masters of the world's art Leonardo's "Mona Lisa" and "The Jeweler," Titian's "La Bella" "The Man with the Gloves" and "The Entombment" Rembrandt's "Supper at Emmaus" Velasquez's "L'Infante Margarite" and Albertinelli's "The Salutation" are among the engravings to come. It is said that this series of pictures is being received with great interest in Italy where are most of the originals which Mr. Cole has reproduced All of his pictures are engraved directly from the originals, Mr Cole doing his work in the galleries or churches in front of the paintings, and the great value of the series is in the absolutely faithful rendering which the engraver has given of the artists' work

Interview with Wanamaker

NEW YORK, June 25—The Mail and Express to night prints an interview with Postmaster General Wanamaker The following is a portion of it

"Why are removals made so rapidly?"

"They are not made rapidly The daily changes going on in a city of 29,000 inhabitants are many, and if our postmasters were all put together in a city they would make a city of that size. There would be deaths and resignations, necessary removals and expirations of terms of service that would naturally require many hundreds of new appointments every week."

"But there is a great deal of criticism been ... removals"

"Yes, it always has been so and always will be so until it becomes the custom with the government to publish actual reasons for these changes In many instances reasons are upon the inspectors' reports, which if published, would destroy the future of the man and leave a shadow upon his family There has been often much criticism simply because politics are believed to be involved, when the sole cause of removal has been drunkenness, neglect of duty, and proved unfitness to hold the important office of postmaster To allow a postmaster to serve out his term who does not appear at his office more than once in several weeks, or who sits at his business several squares away and manages the post office with women and boys has no merit in it to win the approval of any community It would seem to be better for the good of the people if these persons would resign instead of waiting to have complaints lodged against them and then be removed by the department People who draw pay from the government ought to be compelled to give faithful service or resign, and if they do neither, the department will recommend their removal no matter how much criticism and misapprehension of facts may be made"

Cincinnati Parade.

CINCINNATI, June 25—A grand parade of all the Turners assembled in this city took place this morning The Turners were marshalled in six divisions and marched through the principal streets of the city to Inwood park where a picnic was held The picnic was entirely an informal affair, there being no exercises save a few wrestling matches Before the Turners left the campus they were addressed by Colonel Gus Tafel and Hon Ben Butterworth

The police force of Cincinnati headed the procession followed by the grand marshal and staff, and Mayor Mosby, ex Mayor Smith Judge Bole and other guests After these came a great army of Turners The first and second divisions were made up of visiting Turner veteran societies The third was composed of 1600 active Turners in full uniform as they appeared in the exercises at the camps The fourth division consisted of several regiments of the state militia including the Ninth Ohio infantry regiment Twenty eighth and One Hundred and Sixth O V, and a number of German societies Twenty German societies of Cincinnati and vicinity made up the 5th division The sixth division brought up the rear with numerous societies from various parts of Ohio and Kentucky Prizes were awarded at Inwood park at 8 o'clock to night

Irish Political Prisoners.

BALTIMORE, June 25—Some time ago the editor of the Dublin, Ireland Freeman's Journal sent a request to a number of prominent men in the United States and Canada asking them for their opinion of the treatment political prisoners have received in Ireland during the past three years Among the answers was the following from Cardinal Gibbons

"RECTORY, BALTIMORE, DEAR SIR—In reply to your favor of the 9th inst I may say as far as my observation goes ... to judge from the ... thoughtful ... treatment of political prisoners in Ireland has been exceedingly harsh and wantonly severe and ... compelled by conscience But I hope this treatment will ... the principles of ... affairs which ... the ... the ... between ... natural ... place to honorable emulation in the field of commerce and industry ... the ... of our ... English Women of High Standing Who are Shopkeepers.

Mrs. Ashton Dilke Writes of Lady Gordon the Milliner.

Miss Charlotte Robinson "Home Art Decorator to Her Majesty."

[Copyrighted 1899 by The Press Syndicate.]

LONDON, June 5, 1899.

The present month is the time for selling the London shops at their best. This year the shop windows are gayer and more attractive than ever. The great dress making establishments offer an quite a bewildering wealth of many tinted garments, while the bonnet shops almost rival in gaudiness the tulip beds in Hyde park. In the general competition for favor and custom the lady shopkeeper—that most recent product of our inventive nineteenth century—is not left behind. She, too, hurries over to Paris in the Easter holidays and decks her shop on her return with all the latest novelties and most bewitching concoctions of Parisan art. Imitating the example of their brother artists of the brush these artists of the needle have their "show-days" and afternoons at home in their show rooms, when their lady friends gather in force to drink tea and inspect the new stock and when both buyers and sellers fraternize with a democratic equality which would positively startling did one ever allow oneself to be astonished by society's latest whim.

It is quite "the thing" nowadays for our aristocracy to go into trade, not in a backhanded surreptitious sort of way, but with much self advertisement, and in the full light of day. The hated word, which twenty years ago filled the refined ear with contempt and loathing, is fast losing all its old sting and everybody at least knows somebody else, quite in our own set, I assure you,—who has taken to business of one sort or another. Democracy, women's rights, and above all that dearth of money, which is jolly described as "hard times," have all contributed to the result.

Our aristocratic shops started in the [illegible] of. For several years the Marquis of Londonderry's coal carts have perambulated the streets of the metropolis bearing his lordship's name in full, the Earl of Shrewsbury's hansoms are the smartest and swiftest in London and quite recently the Earl of Coventry has blossomed out into a bona fide manufacturer of jams and pickles. Soon the ladies began to follow suit. If lords may sell coals, why should not ladies sell milk? And so the Duchess of Hamilton has started a model dairy at Ipswich, and no one thinks any the worse of her grace for doing so; while the honorable Mrs. Moberly presides over a daintily furnished establishment of a similar nature somewhere in the regions of Notting Hill.

For the most part, however, ladies have taken to the eminently feminine occupations of dress making and millinery. And in this they have shown their wisdom. Good taste is a natural gift, which Englishwomen of the lower classes seldom possess and never acquire. What these cultivated shopkeepers lack in practical knowledge and business ability, they make up for in refined taste and novelty of ideas. A lady is, moreover, backed in starting by a ready made clientele of curious and interested friends. The result is that the movement so far has been a distinct success for those who ventured boldly into the stream of competition, ladies find that it adds an extra pleasure to the already varied joys of shopping to discuss their purchases with a woman of real taste and refinement, and the only people who regard this new social departure with dismay are the bona fide dress makers, whose feelings can best be compared to those of the hard working actress when she sees a society beauty step straight into the front rank on the boards.

The interesting point is that the social position of these ladies has hardly been affected at all by their business enterprise. People rightly admire their pluck and energy, and they continue to dine out at night with the ladies who have patronized their shops by day. Perhaps the gracious sanction of royalty, which has not been wanting in the present instance, has had a good deal to do with this unusual tolerance. When pretty Mrs. Charlie Pocklington, whose husband is in the 4th Hussars, set up as a dress maker in Grafton street, under the name of Mme. Lili, Princess Christian was one of her earliest customers, and both the Princess of Wales and Princess Beatrice have ordered their gowns from her. And when Mrs Pocklington goes to court herself, it is Mme Lili who provides the gown—a feat of a Jekyll and Hyde nature, which, for economical reasons, many women would like to copy. Another lady in very smart society who took to dressmaking not long ago is Mrs Charles Gurney, a beauty in her day, and sister to Val Prinsep, the artist, and niece of the Countess Spencer. Her daughter Miss Laura Gurney was a bridesmaid to the late Duchess of Marlborough, and she appears in her mother's exquisite dress making establishment in Sloane street. Lady Gordon, who is the wife of Mr. Ashton Dilke, the Newcastle [illegible] in the Liberal interest, is a [illegible] and [illegible] Miss Cooper, after a successful career as a [illegible], married Mr. Ashton Dilke, who held office in Mr. Gladstone's administration. Her ladyship's first venture in the world of business was a little shop in Park street, Mayfair. In the window shown off to advantage by a dark plush curtain are one or three dainty little creations fresh from Paris, lovely, all in pretty colours, and set off by a well polished window through which one catches glimpses of a tiny work room. Beyond, I realized on the other morning to be couched up in the latest fashions for the summer, and was shown charming little creations of lace and flowers very small and simple in the way of bonnets and for hats the large low crowned broad brimmed shapes with streaming ribbons behind, which somehow never get thoroughly acclimatized in England. Lady Granville's prices are by no means ruinous of course, at times they run up to four or five guineas a bonnet, but she says that she often has to make hats at 30 and 35 shillings, for ladies declare they are so poor they can't afford to pay any more.

Lady Gordon, who, by the way, trades under the name of Mme Lierre, enjoys her business very much. She is almost always to be found in the shop, makes a capital saleswoman, with pleasant graceful manners, and, though the actual trimming of the bonnets is left to an experienced forewoman she directs and suggests everything herself. She has admirable taste, and overflows with ideas—a most valuable accomplishment when you have buyers who know neither what they want themselves, nor what suits their faces. Mme. Lierre prides herself on being well beforehand with the fashions; she gets her models from Paris, but tones them down a bit to suit the more [illegible] English taste. She told me she made bonnets for a good many American women, and also for the Princess of Wales, to do so being the height of ambition of every milliner in England.

It is hardly fair to speak of Miss Charlotte Robinson as a shop keeper, for she is an artist in every sense of the word, but as she is also the [illegible] of one of the most fascinating shop windows in [illegible] at the corner of Brook street and New Bond street, I cannot resist the temptation of describing her work. I called in not long ago with a view of investing in a dressing case rack, of new and ingenious construction. I was quite enchanted by all the latest notions and clever designs in the furniture line, which emanate from Miss Robinson's fertile brain. Besides being a born artist, with a real eye for decorative effect, she [illegible] a positive genius for inventiveness. While wood music racks, Louis XVI. [illegible] painted gimcrack tables, and photo frames of every size and shape, both in wood and in delicate tinted glass, the latter a special patent of her own, crowd the little shop.

But this shop, as I have said is only one side of Miss Robinson's work. Her real occupation is house decorating, and she is never without two or three houses on hand, which are often left entirely to her direction from cellar to garret. One enviles her the opportunity of such perpetual practical application of taste and talent. Americans will be pleased to know that it was while traveling in their own country that Charlotte Robinson, struck by the decoration of so [illegible] of the great New York hotels she visited, resolved to devote herself professionally to the work. This was some eight or ten years ago, and the recent kindly patronage of Queen Victoria, who has bestowed upon her the title of "Home Art Decorator to Her Majesty," may be taken as a sign and seal of her success.

In her artistic work the lady receives much assistance from her sister, Mrs. McClelland; it is she who designs and paints the charming flower panels which form a special feature of Miss Robinson's decorative work, and of which some excellent specimens may be seen at the Brook street establishment. These panels consist of groups of natural flowers, hand-painted on some kind of pale-tinted leather and then mounted on woodwork, also painted to complete the harmony of color. For dwellers in smoky and sooty London, where nothing remains clean for a single month, it is a satisfaction to know that these delicate works of art can positively be scrubbed down with soap and water. One cannot imagine a more effective way of turning a dingy town drawing room into a palace of art, than by applying to Miss Robinson for her assistance. I am sorry to say that I have never had the pleasure of meeting her personally but I have often been told that she is a most charming and attractive woman, with a quick intuitive sympathy, which no doubt lies at the root of much of her art work, and which seldom fails to turn her business relations into pleasant acquaintanceship.

It seems a far cry from Newnham college to millinery, and yet I know a very cultured ex Newnham student who has "gone into bonnets." In her case, mathematics appear to have acted as an excellent foundation for business, for she has [illegible] upon a very successful career in her enterprise. The lady I refer to is Mrs Cooper Oakley, who trades in New Bond street under the now well known name of Mme Dalis. The Newnham [illegible] in Cambridge, to the [illegible] are always held [illegible] as Miss Cooper, after a successful career as a teacher, married Mr. Cooper Oakley, who held office in Mr. Gladstone's administration. He died [illegible] and Mrs. Oakley left her husband's study of which he was [illegible] to set up in the Bond street establishment. Her business has been [illegible] with a rather handsome face and a very quiet ladylike manner. She always wears on her premises herself, and always has a very positive opinion as to what does or does not suit them. Her prices are certainly high, usually from three to four guineas, but I can testify from personal experience that a bonnet from her is a joy not come for ever but anyhow, as long as it lasts.

In one point Madame Dalis's [illegible] a good example to all lady employers of labor she has the interests of her employes very much at heart. She discovered that in the scant half hour which is all that shop assistants, lady clerks, etc, are allowed for their midday meal, they often do no more than eat a hurried bun at the nearest baker for want of a proper dining place in the neighborhood. To remedy this evil, she has recently started a charming little cheap restaurant, called The Dorothy, for women only. I lunched there the other day, and had a plain, but excellently cooked repast, for the small sum of sixpence. The place is prettily decorated with Japanese fans and ornaments, the food is daintily served, and the waiting is excellent. I need hardly add that the scheme has been an admirable success for all concerned, and that as many as 300 women lunch there in a single day. Now that the scheme has been inaugurated, it is to be hoped that "Dorothys" will spring up all over London.

M. M. DILKE.

Sells Bros and Barretts' circus comes on the 1st of August. The following notice of the show is from a California paper: "The circus has come and gone, with all its attendant excitement, and where but yesterday all was bustle and activity no sound disturbs the silence, and the loneliness is intensified by the trodden grass and the brown circle, that look like ring worms on the face of nature. It was a good circus, though, in every particular, even to the side show, with its dwarfs, giant, fat woman and fire eating wizards. The parade was far beyond that of former shows, both in variety and splendor. The costumes of the men and women were new and bright, the trappings of the animals were untarnished, and the decorations of the vehicles were resplendent with gilded beauty. The performance was far ahead of what Tulare has been favored with in late years, and in place of the usual grumbling after the circus has gone there is a feeling of satisfaction. We cannot give space to a special mention of the programme; but while all was good the features that seemed to afford the most entertainment were the wide mouthed hippopotami that waddled around the circuit scratching a mouthful of grass at every opportunity; the menage riding of Misses Isabel Dutton and Allie Jackson, the excellent vaulting and the bicycle riding, the trapeze performing, Signor Blau's feasts of driving twenty-five or thirty horses, three abreast, the elephant clown, Rexo and Reno's contortion act, and the races. The latter feature is something new and quite exciting, especially the ladies' flat race and the Roman chariot race. The menagerie was first-class, and the cages of the animals were clean, and did not give forth the old time odor. Altogether the circus was far superior to what it was last year."

Mr Emery P. Moon of Husted has furnished the following record of the weather for the week ending June 19th: Highest temperature 85 on the 18th, lowest temperature 47° on the 15th, weekly means temperature 63.25. Direction of the wind—two days north, four days south, one day veering.

The Power of Imit

The Contemporary Review.

I know of no more appalling example of the power of one life to influence another in far distant periods than that which is afforded by the strange and horrible history of the Marechal de Retz. A man of noble birth, great wealth, great distinction as a soldier, and high in favor with his sovereign, he took to the most horrible course of child murder of which we have any narrative, and when at last driven to confess on he made his statement as to the origin of his crimes. "The desire to commit these atrocities came upon me eight years ago. I left court to go to Chantonce that I might claim the property of my grandfather deceased. In the library of the castle I found a Latin book—Suetonius. I fell of accounts of the cruelties of the Roman emperors. I read the charming history of Tiberius, Caracalla and other Cæsars and the pleasure they took in watching the agonies of tortured children. Thereupon I resolved to imitate and surpass these same Cæsars, and that very night began to do so."

ANCIENT ADVERTISING.

IN THE GOLDEN DAYS WHEN AN OCEAN ROVER

[illegible]

A BABYLONIAN AUCTIONEER.

The Hebrews cried their wares on the [illegible] of Jerusalem. The Greeks, in obedience to the oracle at Delphi, employed musicians to give the pitch to the voices who announced the gladiatorial and public festivals. In France, in the Middle Ages, [illegible] were a national institution. They solicited patronage for the [illegible], proclaimed royal decrees, in short, all matters except that which pertained to the [illegible]. The rivalry existing between the criers employed by the various wine [illegible]. The wine criers would [illegible] through the streets [illegible] the people to taste of the vintage. Their [illegible] crept into the ballets of the period and are now a part of the national [illegible] of France. A [illegible] and [illegible] story, which foreshadows the modern Salvation Army, is found among the old proclamations relating to this system of advertising. An old [illegible] Aldermen desired to proclaim the Word of God, but not having [illegible] powerful, she paid a wine cooper to go [illegible] the town, and instead of crying the praises of wine, to proclaim: "Good is righteous! God is merciful! God is good and chastisement!" As the man went about shouting these words she followed him, exclaiming: "He speaks well! He says truly!" The poor old creature failed in her pious desire. It was the pot vanity prevailed by reaction. She was arrested, tried and subsequently burned alive. Although the crier has long since fallen from his high estate, he thrives to some purpose in many modern countries. In England and America the auctioneer is a component of the most characteristic of this order of prospectors.

With the invention of writing wax tablets, tiles and signboards were introduced. The Greeks and Romans [illegible] on their walls, as Pompeii and Herculaneum excavations disclose. These advertisements are the literature's best clue to the daily lives of the inhabitants of those lost cities. In most advertisements we approach Cowper's line of seeing life "through the keyhole of retreat," so faithfully do they reflect the manners and customs of a people. On the outer walls of the Roman houses were whole [illegible] spaces for the inscription of their affairs. They were solicitous that their bills and signboards should be placed where they would attract most attention. Their favorite place was the amphitheatre or the baths where the people were wont to tarry. Through the old poets and dramatists we [illegible] of advertisements. Pliny tells of poets hiring horses in which they built orateriums and publicly read their poems, and of [illegible] prospectuses of their works.

The printing press, and its offspring, the newspaper, gave [illegible] impetus to advertising. To France is accredited the honor of first attaching a regular and [illegible] business of newspaper advertising. The [illegible] Petites Affaires, a journal devoted to the domestic wants of France, lays two and a half [illegible] of uninterrupted prosperity. The newspaper, as a means of advertising, met with slow progress in England. The evil was of 1666 created a [illegible] for news, which met much opposition from the recipients. Nobody [illegible] Ben Jonson declares that "information [illegible] to be news to be [illegible]." But the need of trade gradually crept in with the people and journals, and for many years the news was subservient to the advertisements. "The great" Dr Johnson wrote, "who first took advantage of the general curiosity that was excited by slips of letter to bring the [illegible] of the news into his shop of shops where the best puffs and puffed in [illegible] was undoubtedly a man of great sagacity and profound knowledge in the nature of man. But when he had once shown the way it was easy to follow him."

Despite the bitter sarcasm, newspaper advertising flourished as well. The first advertisements were confined to thefts, loses, runaways, followed by booksellers and quacks. Scarcity of news was a great advantage to the early advertiser. It is curious to glance over the files of the old English papers. Advertiser and editor speak in the first person. With unblushing candor men and women advertise for conjugal partners and their manner of expressing their wants in many instances outvie the realism of Zola or Edgar Saltus. Matrimonial advertisement is of modern origin. Herodotus speaks of the Babylonian wife auctions, at which the lands were found for all young [illegible]. The price brought by the beauty was given as a dowry to her plainer sister. Women without beauty were given away. Would not advanced advertisers put a higher price on dowered [illegible] than dowerless [illegible]?

A CHAMPAGNE "AD."

Continued, and moved at the rate of the pleasure over the past. Scarcely a town in the U. S. is without its [illegible].

Never lay [illegible] an American newspaper, says that French satirist with an Irish [illegible], Max O'Rell, "without looking over the advertisements. Ten to one you will be rewarded for your pains."

It is peculiar to [illegible] the absence of a distinctive literature, a distinctive art in advertising. But wherever skill we may [illegible] in other field finds a creative expression in our advertisements. To the American people may be justly credited the elevation of advertising to an art—an art which [illegible] today the admiration of the world.

The genius of Hogarth, the genius of Addison, the wit of Swift, the credulity of Munchausen are to be found in the A[illegible] [illegible] for public patronage.

There is [illegible] will not ride in pursuit of the almighty dollar. This is a sense of a return to the foreign. An English [illegible] writing less than fifteen years ago, says: "A [illegible] editors have peculiar notions on the subject of advertisements and the duties of advertisers. He then goes on to [illegible] of their [illegible] or morality, and in the [illegible] of black, [illegible] for [illegible] so he breaks off with the [illegible] remark "that the majority are too intent on getting to pay to care much for what is said of them." The humor in the [illegible] of American advertisers is their [illegible] coming much in the form of [illegible]. Johnny Bull will shake his sides while he tells you of the grocer in [illegible] who "[illegible] on the fence of a [illegible] in large white letters: "Use J. [illegible] tea if you would keep out of here," or the [illegible] in New York state who left his [illegible] blank with this note in very small type at the bottom: "This space was sold to A. E. Brown & Co. but as their [illegible] is [illegible] both already, they decline to use it."

The writing of advertisements is a [illegible] the dignity of a profession. Much of the style of writing is charmingly [illegible] and what contains no little information of a [illegible] nature, as many a [illegible] has discovered after pursuing a half [illegible] with quickening interest to find in the end how he may become a Hero [illegible] in strength or a Helen in beauty by the use of certain elixirs! There is more [illegible] in the writing of advertisements than in legitimate literature. Accordingly the writing of advertisements, and guarantee appropriate illustrations and the [illegible] of [illegible] in whatever newspaper or periodical the advertiser may desire. Most of the celebrated advertisers write their own ads.

"It is only needful to [illegible] at a thing often enough," says [illegible] "and everybody will end by believing it."

"WALKING up Seventh street yesterday I met a friend [illegible] out of a door who said to me, 'Listen! If you want to see something funny you [illegible] to [illegible] right up stairs with me.'"

("Let" is Washingtoneese.)

"I'm in a hurry; won't it take long?" I said.

"No 'ndeed!"

Ella is more Washingtonese heard in every other sentence—and in the sleepy [illegible] sentences appear "Yes" and "No."

So we turned up the stairs.

"Can we look in?" he asked of a [illegible] man at the head. Upon I recognized as a patent lawyer doing business there. "Certainly." And he led us into the back [illegible] and [illegible] a sheet that covered two small [illegible] looking objects elevated on chairs. But it did not seem to me "funny."

"[illegible] evidently!" I said with a shudder. "Yes, rather," said the lawyer, "[illegible] these sights [illegible] are sanctified. Touch it."

I laid my finger on the arm of one [illegible] about as cold as the air, but I was surprised to find it soft and [illegible] as if in life. The flesh yielded to pressure, but [illegible] itself at once as in a [illegible] one feel it," the lawyer said, "and illustrate a patent for embalming the dead in the patent [illegible] is 'of on having a working [illegible] of embalming, and this is my [illegible]. The [illegible] of decomposition will never [illegible], but after a few years or centuries they will [illegible] dry up, like the mummies of Egypt. "Take [illegible] perpetual motion as [illegible]," I said to Col. Mitchell (for [illegible] in Washington expecting [illegible] Patent Office is either a Colonel or a General—but Powell was really in battle, [illegible] a differ [illegible]), "we regard it as unattainable, and, with judicial [illegible] and to all applications for such a patent we [illegible] simply reply, requiring a working [illegible]."

"And ends it?"

"Always. By the way, Mr. Angell, though, of the [illegible] can tell you [illegible]."

I called on Aughinbaugh, a man in the [illegible].

"For forty years we have [illegible] a working model of perpetual motion, he said, "and we're a nine [illegible]. Enough to make us incredulous, don't you think? [illegible] are only all based on the principle of reciprocating weights and levers like this," and he opened an old book on Perpetual Motion and turned to the picture of Colt's invention, he explained.

"This was devised in Belgium, lately," he went on "in 1873, and two centuries not started it a peg. It [illegible] on a number of weighted levers rising a little [illegible] they actually rise and falling a little [illegible] they actually fall. A [illegible] do it, you see."

Colonel Mitchell had all [illegible] to the [illegible] of patents for the slot machines in which you drop a coin to get [illegible] and I made my way to that division.

"Yes," said its chief, "the slot division is [illegible] night and day. By [illegible] he look as if the drummer and the [illegible] would equally be [illegible] by [illegible] ter, and every mortal want [illegible] would come to be supplied through [illegible]. Why, just look here."

And he produced drawings and [illegible] [illegible] as high as a man and of [illegible] [illegible] nality.

"Here's the first," he went on. "[illegible] nickel in the slot and it will [illegible] you [illegible] out to you a little card [illegible] stamped neatly on it. [illegible] that will tell you [illegible] age for a nickel [illegible] the slightest assistance.

I looked into the belly of this [illegible]. Its interior is [illegible] elaborate, with [illegible] and cogs and [illegible] levers and shafts and eccentric [illegible] log to the desired end. I turned away with a sense of dizziness.

The Glen Avenue house is now open. Mr. Holley, the proprietor, has fitted up rooms and can now accommodate fifty guests.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Martin, who have been residents of Colorado Springs, have taken rooms at the Barker. They will be in Manitou several weeks.

Dr. David Hunt, a prominent physician of Lynn, Mass., is at the Barker with his family. Mrs. S. D. Warren and Geo. W. Hammond of Boston accompany them.

A couple of army officers, F. I. Dent, U. S. A., with his wife, and W. W. Daugherty, U. S. A., in company with Mrs. L. E. Campbell of Denver, are at the Manitou.

W. R. Jewell, the manager of the Electric Light company, who absconded some time ago, has been taken in Portland, Oregon. Marshal Bowers will return with him in a few days.

The Galgano string band plays afternoons and evenings alternately at the Cliff and the Barker. The band is one of the best in the state and the hotel proprietors are fortunate in securing their services.

Messrs. Bern, Shaw and Paton, three gentlemen from the British Isles, who have been stopping at the Barker, leave this morning on a mountain trip. They have secured a camping outfit and will start for Beaver creek, expecting to be gone a month. They will then return to Manitou for the remainder of the season.

The Mellow Trial.

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 25.—McDow's trial was resumed this morning. The state has thus far established beyond question the fact of the killing, the fact that McDow shot Dawson in the back and the fact that he tried to bury the body.

The evidence of Marie Bardayrow, Mrs. Dawson's French maid, was the feature of the trial to day. She was brought here by Mrs. Dawson from Geneva, Switzerland, two years ago as governess for her children. She is 20 years old and a handsome brunette, with dark eyes, an intelligent face and is well developed. She attracted the attention of every spectator in court. She understands English, but speaks it imperfectly. An effort to have her testify through an interpreter was objected to by McDow's counsel, and she spoke in English. Her manner was collected and throughout the ordeal she bore herself with an air of innocence. She successfully combatted all the attempts of Judge McGrath, McDow's counsel, to elicit something that would weaken her testimony.

Her first meeting with McDow, she testified was on the First of last February. He met her on the street and asked her to run away with him. She told him she would not do it, she would not leave Mrs. Dawson for anything. He met her quietly on the street after that and persecuted her with his attentions when she was going to school with Captain Dawson's children and when she was returning home. He visited her several times at Dawson's house when Mrs. Dawson was in Washington and Captain Dawson at his work in the News and Courier office. He sent her flowers and poetry and gave her a watch to remember him by. He told her he had married a German woman for her money, but that his married life was not happy and he wanted her to run away with him and marry him. McDow told her he could not get a divorce from his wife in Charleston but would take the witness to North Carolina and after securing a divorce would marry her.

She gave McDow a book bearing the title "Botwixt Love and Law." She had never read it, but knew about what it was. She said the story was about a married woman in love with a man. In her case the situation was reversed and was a case of a married man in love with a woman. McDow had taken her photograph from her and had kissed her "two times" and "only two times." She knew McDow's conduct toward her was not proper. She had never told any of Captain Dawson's family about the affair. She did not love McDow. She felt for his misfortune and she had a feeling of kindness for him. She believed if she had given herself to him he would have supported her. She believed what he said while he was talking to her.

The woman's story was told without excitement. She shrugged her shoulders as is usual with a French woman, when she did not understand the question, but made a good impression by her conduct on the stand. The case for the defense will be opened to-morrow and perhaps McDow himself will take the stand. The arguments will probably not begin before Friday.

"Red Nosed Mike" Hanged.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., June 25.—Mike Rizzelo, alias "Red Nosed Mike," was hanged at 10 o'clock this morning.

The crime for which he paid the extreme penalty was committed on October 19, 1888. J. Brainard McCord, paymaster for Contractor Charles McFadden, accompanied by Hugh Flanagan, a stable boss, was driving from Wilkesbarre to the railroad camp above Miners Mills with $12,000, intending to pay off the workmen. Michael Rizzelo, Giuseppi Revlreno and Vincenzo Vellaio lay in wait on the lonely mountain road, expecting the arrival of McCord and Flanagan. On their approach Rizzelo fired three shots into Flanagan, killing him, and Revlreno and McCord twice killing him.

Although Mike and his companions were suspected and arrested they were discharged an hour after left the city going to Pittston (or taking with them their plunder of $12,000. Revlreno and Vellaio suddenly escaped to Italy with their booty. Later evidence was secured which led to Mike's arrest, confession and conviction. Rizzelo's last night on earth was spent in prayer. He refused to partake of breakfast, taking only a cup of milk. He asked Sheriff Brady to hurry his work without any delay as he was prepared to die. He was courageous to the last. His neck was not broken and he died hard of strangulation.

A LOT OF GOOD STORIES

THEY ARE TOLD BY STATESMEN OF THE CAPITAL CITY

There Is Also a Story Told by the Wife of Corporal Tanner the New Pension Commissioner and It Is About a Lady with a Fine Complexion

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Senator Wade Hampton has a good story to tell. As far as is known it is up to this time the only one in which the senator is the principal actor, who has kept the secret so well that the president or anybody else did not know it. Very few people have heard the story, and the president, who is a great story teller himself, does not like it the less because it is not at his expense. He is said to have laughed heartily when he heard it, and he is fully entitled to it, as it was at his expense that it was told. The story Senator Hampton told was an army story—not particularly new and fresh but new to the president.

"One day during the war," said the senator, "I ride out of a South Carolina regiment was marching a round of inspection. Seeing lazily on a rail fence whittling at a piece of shingle, he found a man whose face was not familiar to him. The colored man was ragged. As I approached the loafer he called out to him with all proper severity, 'Who the ... are you, sitting here in this fence, sir?' respond the man on the fence, continuing his whittling, 'am the chief ... of the regiment. Who ... are you?'"

That the president has a strong sense of humor, despite his natural dignity and that sense of humor which is sometimes mistaken for coldness, is becoming rapidly apparent. During one of the many discussions which have been had at the White House about the status of the colored men of the south, a new story was told by Col. Parsons, of Alabama, and greatly enjoyed by the president. Col. Parsons was contending that the people of the south know the colored man better than the people of the north, and really like him better and treat him better. To illustrate his point he related a story which was first brought to Washington by Maj. Jones, of Pine Bluff, Ark. Maj. Jones is a colored man himself, but a rich one. He is, in fact, the richest man in Pine Bluff, where he owns the street car line and is interested in other large enterprises. Maj. Jones, like Col. Parsons, believes the south is the place for the negro, and that the people of the south, with all their sentiment about the freedman, are not one-half so ready to give him practical help as the men of the north.

"There was a nigger named Sam who used to drive a street car for me in Pine Bluff," said Maj. Jones. "Sam could read, and in the newspapers he had seen so much of the love the people of the north bear for the colored man that he concluded the north was the place for him. He talked to me about it, and said he was going up to Iowa and see if he couldn't do better. I advised against it, but he would go, and go he did. In Iowa he was pretty well treated. The folks up there called him 'Mr.' and shook hands with him, and talked politics with him as if he were an equal. But they didn't give him any work. Nobody seemed anxious to have Sam work for him.

"Pretty soon till the little money Sam had taken with him was all gone, and he then concluded the best thing he could do would be to go to Arkansas, where white men might call him hard names, but at the same time give him something to do and eat. So he started, on foot, hoping to pick up enough food on the way to keep him going. The first place he struck for grub was at a farm house where a man from New York lived. The farmer was very polite to him, but when the grub business was mentioned, said times were hard and he didn't feel as he had anything to spare. Sam trudged along to another farm house, and another, and his experience at the first was repeated at each of the others. Everybody was polite, but nobody gave him any chuck. For two or three days Sam hadn't a mouthful to eat and his belly was fairly hanging up against his backbone when he came to a place where a man was out in the front yard mowing grass. To him Sam told the now old, old story of leaving Arkansas, of his bad luck in Iowa, of his good luck to get back to Pine Bluff, and of his starving condition. Before he had finished his story the farmer interrupted him: 'You did black Ed. Talbot's horse, why didn't you have enough sense to stay in Arkansas?' Sam's face brightened instantly. He almost fell on his knees for joy, and cried out: 'Boss, you remind me how glad I is to see you. Why, I could jump over the roof of yo' house! Of course, I is glad to get back to Pine Bluff. Why, in the boss town, we black folks can cut some chuck. Perhaps you will know me next time you see me. And saying this he filled himself with chuck. And he did it right and started out in the morning with a bag full of bread and meat to help his belly off his back, while he jogged on toward Pine Bluff.

"Sam used to come to the Pine Bluff post office every day for his letters, and he was in the United States service, and another great story teller. Indeed, stories telling appeared to be one of his principal duties of southern states. Every day, Washington ... Congressmen ... Senators ... Congressmen ... Senators ... Congressmen ... Senators

DAILY WEATHER REPORT

[illegible]

Denver will open at 8 o'clock this morning.

Dr. John Grammer of Denver attended the meeting of the State Dental society.

Half rates to Denver on July 3d and 4th good to return till July 7th. Five days trains.

Mr. and Mrs. John Walker and family of Pueblo are spending the evening at The Antlers.

In another column will be found a call for bids for the erection of the new United Presbyterian church.

The social by the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Christian church at the city hall last night was a very pleasant affair.

The Denver & Rio Grande are now selling excursion tickets to Salt Lake and return good for sixty days at $23.00 for the round trip.

Superintendent Frost is now at work with a force of men laying water pipe on High street. Nine hundred feet of 2 inch pipe is being laid.

Roy Palmer, a young son of Mr. Omer Palmer, had his collar bone broken and was otherwise injured by being thrown from a horse some days ago.

Among the passengers for the east on last night's Santa Fe train were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wheeler for Wheeling, Va., and Mr. Geo. W. Piper for Boston.

Leslie Warren, the boy killed at Falcon while playing about the cars, will be buried at Evergreen cemetery, this city to day. Coroner Davis did not hold an inquest.

Mrs. Lord, formerly day operator at the Western Union office in this city, is at present in the Western union office at Helena, Mont., where Mr. Lord also holds a responsible position.

A street doctor with a banjo player, slight of hand man and other accompaniments, drew a large audience on the streets last night. They will continue their exhibition for a week or more.

Mr. Tom Karl, the famous tenor of the Boston Ideals, came down from Denver yesterday and registered at The Antlers. He was not singing last night and preferred to spend the day in Colorado Springs.

D. & R. G. are now selling tickets to Palmer Lake as follows: Five-day tickets, $1.35 round trip; Sunday tickets, $1.00; Saturday or Sunday tickets, good to return on Monday, $1.25. Five or ten one ticket, good for five days, $1.25 each. Half rates to all points July 3rd and 4th.

The east addition to the Elk hotel is being rapidly pushed to completion. The electric light wiring was finished yesterday. When completed, a hand [illegible] and sitting room will occupy the lower floor. This will give more room in the dining hall, where the office is now temporarily located. Workmen are also engaged in frescoing the halls of the portion of the building now occupied.

No one whether they have ever visited Austin Bluff or not should fail to call at the office of M. Kennedy, No. 9 North Tejon street, and examine the fine oil painting which he had hung up yesterday. This painting is about five by seven feet in size and illustrates very fully one of the many magnificent views to be had from that locality. It is by our local artist, Mr. Charles Craig, and is thought to be one of his best.

Owing to the high wind which injured the screen last evening and the unfavorable appearance of the weather at the usual opening time, there was no stereopticon exhibition. The damage will be repaired in time for to-night's exhibition. The management have received word from Mr. W. H. McCreery, chairman of the Johnstown relief committee, at Pittsburg, stating that as soon as stereopticon slides can be made of the flood scenes they will be sent here for exhibition on this screen. These will embrace photographs of all the prominent places in the Johnstown vicinity.

Breckenridge, the new first baseman, and Hapeman, the new pitcher of the Colorado Springs ball club, went to Leadville yesterday and it is hoped they will be able to strengthen the team. The team has been very unfortunate both times it has been away from home in being compelled to start out with many of its players crippled. It is rumored that the club is to be farther strengthened by the addition of Lou Snyder, the well known catcher. The club will arrive at home on the morning of the 1st and remain until the 3d, when they go to Pueblo for the 4th of July games.
